

SR 520 construction update: March 2013

Floating bridge construction - Lake Washington

Workers pose next to the final anchor for the new SR 520 floating bridge before it is placed in Lake Washington. Crews placed the 58th of 58 anchors on March 15, 2013, marking a milestone for the project.

Crews used cranes mounted on floating barges to place the final anchor in Lake Washington.

Work continues on east approach piers located at the Medina shoreline, on the east end of Lake Washington.

Pontoon construction - Aberdeen

A worker examines the exterior of a 360-foot-long longitudinal pontoon, 30 feet above the casting basin floor.

A Kiewit-General worker builds formwork atop a new pontoon at the construction site in Aberdeen, WA.

An iron worker examines rebar in wet and chilly weather at the construction site in Aberdeen, WA. Rebar provides structural strength in the new pontoons.

A worker uses compressed air to clean out the intricate web of steel rebar and post-tensioning ducts before crews complete a deck slab concrete pour.
